

Early Journal Content on JSTOR, Free to Anyone in the World

This article is one of nearly 500,000 scholarly works digitized and made freely available to everyone in the world by JSTOR.

Known as the Early Journal Content, this set of works include research articles, news, letters, and other writings published in more than 200 of the oldest leading academic journals. The works date from the mid-seventeenth to the early twentieth centuries.

We encourage people to read and share the Early Journal Content openly and to tell others that this resource exists. People may post this content online or redistribute in any way for non-commercial purposes.

Read more about Early Journal Content at <http://about.jstor.org/participate-jstor/individuals/early-journal-content>.

JSTOR is a digital library of academic journals, books, and primary source objects. JSTOR helps people discover, use, and build upon a wide range of content through a powerful research and teaching platform, and preserves this content for future generations. JSTOR is part of ITHAKA, a not-for-profit organization that also includes Ithaka S+R and Portico. For more information about JSTOR, please contact support@jstor.org.

IN VACATION.

Scientific All Right.—A crooked dairyman stood at the bar of justice charged with selling adulterated milk. With a look of lamb like innocence he entered a plea of not guilty. "But" said the judge, "the testimony shows that it was 25% water.

"Then it must be very high grade," replied the defendant. "If your honor will look up the word 'milk' in the dictionary, you will find it contains from 80 to 90 per cent water. My milk should have been sold for cream."

Life and Death.—A minister who guarded his morning study hour carefully told the new maid that in no circumstances were callers to be admitted—except, of course, he added in case of life and death.

Half an hour later the maid knocked at the door.

"A gentleman to see you, sir."

"Why, I thought I told you—"

"Yes, I told him," she replied, "but he says it's a question of life and death."

So he went downstairs—and found an insurance agent.—Exchange.

More Ways than One.—Charity Worker: "My poor man, I hope that since you have been in prison you have given much time to meditation upon your past errors and have decided to correct your faults."

Prisoner: "Yes, ma'am, I have, for believe me, the next time I pull a job this baby wears gloves."

Rejected.—A lawyer was once consulted by some girl acquaintances and asked to suggest a name for their club. It was to be, they said, for the building of character. Also no men were to be admitted even as guests. They had no use for men. The lawyer thereupon suggested the Building and Lone Association.—The American Legion Weekly.

How to Testify.—A boy twelve years old was the important witness in a lawsuit. One of the lawyers, after cross-examining him severely, said:

"Your father has been talking to you and telling you how to testify, hasn't he?"

"Yes," said the boy.

"Now," said the lawyer, "just tell us how your father told you to testify."

"Well," said the boy, modestly, "father told me the lawyers would try and tangle me in my testimony, but if I would just be careful and tell the truth, I could tell the same thing every time."